v.)

Robert Faiella,)

Defendant)

Motion to Vacate, Set Aside, or Correct
Defendant's Sentence Pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
§2255

Defendant, Robert Faiella, respectfully submits this Motion to Vacate, Set Aside or Correct his Sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §2255.

Procedural History

On January 20, 2015, Robert Faiella pled guilty to a violation of 18 U.S.C. §1960(b)(1)(B). Faiella was sentenced by the Court to a term of 48 months imprisonment. He now serves his sentence at the Satellite Prison Camp Edgefield, in Edgefield, South Carolina.

Factual Summary

Prior to 2015, Faiella operated a business wherein he exchanged money from his customers in return for "bitcoins", a commonly known internet currency. Faiella's customers typically emailed him to arrange the transaction and Faiella completed the transaction in the same manner. Although Faiella believed he did not have to register or license his business, it was determined, and Faiella agreed, that his work did qualify as a "money transmitting business" under federal law. Faiella pled guilty to this crime and sought to be sentenced under the applicable guideline.

Legal Argument

Faiella moves before this Court for an order correcting or reducing his sentence on the ground that he received the ineffective assistance of counsel, which resulted in a longer sentence than he should have received.

The Sixth Amendment to the Constitution guarantees the effective assistance of counsel to those charged with crimes. To prevail on a claim for ineffective assistance of counsel a moving party must show that (1) his attorney's representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness; and (2) due to counsel's errors, the defendant was prejudiced. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984). Prejudice occurs when an error results in a longer sentence than would otherwise have been imposed. Glover v. United States, 531 U.S. 198 (2001).

Faiella's counsel breached the reasonable standard when he failed to ensure that Faiella was sentenced under the proper guideline. Such failure prejudiced Faiella because he received a longer sentence than he should have.

Faiella pled guilty to a violation of 18 U.S.C. §1960(b)(1)(B). When a Court is faced with a criminal defendant who has been convicted it is to recommend a sentence as required by 18 U.S.C. §3553(a)(4) and the United States Sentencing Guidelines. The first step that the sentencing court is to take is set out in U.S.S.G. §1B1.1, which states: "The court shall determine . . . the offense guideline section from Chapter Two (Offense Conduct) applicable to the offense of conviction." See §1b1.1(a)(1). Because this first step determines the base offense level and the ultimate sentence, getting this fact correct is vital to the sentencing process; in fact, doing this incorrectly is a procedural error. The right to due process requires that a defendant be sentenced upon true information. Torres v. United States, 140 F.3d 392 (2nd Cir. 1998).

Faiella was sentenced under the wrong guideline, which led to a much higher sentence. Based on his conviction Faiella should have been sentenced under §2S1.3 and not §2S1.1 as the Court chose. (Compare Commentary, Statutory Provisions from §2S1.1 and §2S1.3.) Though the Court departed from the range in the Guideline, the departure should have been from a much lower starting point. Had this been done properly Faiella would have received a sentence less than half as long as the one he received.

Faiella's counsel breached his duty of reasonable representation when he did not object to the improper application of §2S1.1 to Faiella. The application of the incorrect guideline to Faiella resulted in a much higher sentence than Faiella would have received, prejudicing him. As a result, both prongs of the Strickland test have been satisfied.

Applying the appropriate guideline to Faiella's conviction would have resulted in a guideline range of 24 to 30 months due to an offense level of 17 (base level of 6, plus 14 for the value of the funds, less 3 levels for assuming responsibility in a timely manner). As it was, the Court was presented with an offense level of 25 and a guideline range of 57 to 71 months. Faiella submits that if the Court were faced with a lower guideline range it would likely have granted a reduction below that range.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, Faiella submits that he is entitled to an order of this Court vacating his sentence so that he can be sentenced under the appropriate guideline. When that re-sentence is performed Faiella asks that the Court consider his severe back disability and his need for spinal surgery, which are well documented in the Court's records, and either reduce his sentence to time-served or order any further incarceration to take place on home confinement.

Respectfully submitted,

Robert Faiella
